

From: Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy
Sent: 3/16/2011 1:50:42 PM
To: "jackson.lisap@epamail.epa.gov" <jackson.lisap@epamail.epa.gov>; "Michael DAndrea" <dandrea.michael@epamail.epa.gov>
CC:
Subject: Fwd: Please Have a Susquehanna River Basin Forum

please let me know you got the billboard attachment promoting your EYESONDRILING.

Thank You Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy
From: Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy
Message-ID: <96fc0.7d02cf8c.3aac294c@aol.com>
Date: Fri, 11 Mar 2011 20:41:32 -0500 (EST)
Subject: Please Have a Susquehanna River Basin Forum
To: jackson.lisap@epa.gov
CC: dandrea.michael@epa.gov, R3_RA@epa.gov
Content-Type: multipart/mixed; boundary="part1_96fc0.7d02cf8c.3aac294c_boundary"
Return-path: Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy
Full-name: Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy
MIME-Version: 1.0
X-Mailer: AOL 9.0 VR sub 71
X-AOL-IP: 74.212.16.241
X-Originating-IP: [172.21.188.208]

Dear Lisa Jackson,

I attached a billboard that our community in Susquehanna County PA designed and will run as a billboard campaign around our county seat in Montrose; it promotes your epa program eyesondrilling. Dimock PA, oftentimes referred to as ground zero for natural gas drilling, made our county famous nationally and internationally as the poster child for how not to drill shale gas. Obviously we do not have the drilling moratorium the Delaware Watershed has. Your EPA hosted Delaware Basin Forum for stakeholders 3/9/11 in Philadelphia with 8 satellite locations to assess threats to drinking water, was timely after the series of New York Times articles about fracking waste fluids dumped into PA watersheds released last week.

Currently as PA residents we have no functional right to clean drinking water due to the Halliburton Loophole. Some residents in the Susquehanna watershed have lost their clean drinking water as a direct result of shale gas extraction. Please give the Susquehanna Watershed, and its residents and stakeholders, the same consideration for health effects and drinking water threats you extended to the Delaware. The Susquehanna has experienced unequal protection and consideration with respect to natural gas drilling. The SRBC has no functional jurisdiction over water quality, the DRBC does. The Susquehanna never had the drilling moratorium the Delaware has. Pennsylvania just got a 30 member Marcellus Shale Commission appointed by our new Governor Corbett, whose one member Alan Walker, a coal energy executive, has to quote ProPublica "unprecedented authority to expedite any permit or action pending in any agency where the creation of jobs may be impacted." Another member of this commission which is full of energy industry executives, is Penn State Professor Dr. Terry Engelder, who stated publicly that the aquifer contamination in Dimock resulting from drilling is a shame, but a "necessary sacrifice". Our watershed is a more rural, less wealthy, less politically influential watershed than the Delaware which includes New York City and Philadelphia. Please do not forsake the residents of the Susquehanna Watershed. Please have a forum for us, for our watershed, to assess the real threat to our drinking water and our public health. Please give us some hope.

Sincerely,

Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy Brookyn PA

- keepPAsafe_v5.pdf